

ADJOURNMENT OF THE SENATE

As Soon as Calendar Is Cleared.

LEGISLATION DESIRED BY PRESIDENT HARDING

Action on Over 4,000 Army Nominations.

Republican Members of Senate Committee Begin Work on a Program on Tariff and Tax Revision. Advices Say.

Washington, March 14.—President Harding today, informed Senator Lodge that he is willing to have the senate adjourn as soon as the calendar is cleared. The president stated, however, that the senate would not adjourn until action has been taken on the more than 4,000 army nominations which are pending. Senator Lodge was uncertain as to whether it would be possible to clear the calendar for adjournment today.

The president is expected to send additional nominations to the senate today.

Working on Program.

Washington, March 14.—With Secretary Mellon and a staff of treasury department experts "sitting in," Republican members of the senate finance and house ways-and-means committees began work today on a program of tariff and taxation revision, which it is hoped will meet with the approval of President Harding and a greatly increased Republican majority of congress.

It is conceded by Republican leaders that if such a program is to be successful by any lasting success, they must first accomplish "the difficult task of ironing out the wide divergence of views on the tariff and domestic taxes prevailing among Republican members of both the senate and house. Another acute problem which must be solved, is that of extending practical changes in the existing tariff and internal revenue laws without depleting the enormous revenue required to finance the government, increasing the already high cost of living or interfering with the production and export of American goods so essential to the country's welfare.

The relationship of the domestic to the foreign situation, the serious question of readjustment of exchange and of stabilizing commerce, of assisting both the farmer, the manufacturer and the factory worker, of submerging local or sectional requirements to the needs of the country generally, all enter into the selection of the best methods to be employed in unraveling the grave economic and financial problems congress must deal with.

Other Conference.

Today's conference will be but a start. Other conferences will follow. It is the intention of the Republican leaders to employ the short recess before the convening of congress in extraordinary session, next month, to the consideration of the most practical ways and means of avoiding the legislative breakers ahead.

Use of the first moves anticipated in the substitution of a sales tax for the excess-profits tax. Senator Stewart, Republican of Utah, a member of the senate finance committee, is engaged on legislation providing for such a substitution.

Enactment of an anti-dumping bill to shut out foreign products in large quantities, the passage of an emergency tariff bill, the re-enactment of an amended Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, are only some of the many proposals for existing industrial and business conditions which are being suggested.

Nominations.

Washington, March 14.—President Harding today, sent to the senate the following nominations:

To be director of the war finance commission—Eugene Meyer, Jr., of New York for a term of four years.

To be assistant secretary of war—William Maynard Wainwright, of New York.

To be assistant secretary of the treasury—Elliot Wadsworth, of Massachusetts.

The nomination of Wainwright and Meyer were confirmed by the senate shortly after their receipt.

Wainwright is a New York naval guard officer and served for several years on the staff of Major General O'Ryan, of the Twenty-Seventh division, during the World war.

CANTON MEN ARE HELD TO ANSWER

Cleveland, March 14.—Bonds of from $5,000 to $10,000 were demanded of five Canton men indicted for violation of the federal prohibition laws, by Judge D. C. Weston-haver, in federal court here today. Arrangements are now being made for the release of the men pending trial. Ben-Rudner, William Jacobs and Louis Jacobs are held under bond of $10,000 each, while Charles Langren and Charles Windolph are under $5,000 bond.

RAIL PEOPLE AFTER MONEY

Carriers Lose No Time in Presenting Their Claims.

VERITABLE JAM OF DEMANDS FOR CASH

At Office of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Financial Plight of the Railroad Companies Is Indicated by Their Eagerness to Secure Money from Government.

Washington, March 14.—The financial plight of the railroads was reflected today in a veritable jam of demands for money at the interstate commerce commission.

The carriers have lost no time in presenting claims for partial payments of sums due them under the federal guaranty.

At the commission, a large force of experts was engaged upon the accumulated work. The claims are so certified as speedily as possible, to relieve many of the carriers of present financial difficulty. Some of the roads, unable to meet their fixed operating charges, count upon these payments to partly relieve their credit strain. During the week, the payment certified probably will reach as high as $50,000,000. Officials estimate that by the middle of April, total payments, representing partial sums found to be due the roads, may aggregate $200,000,000.

Officials of the commission also arranged to hurry forward the payments to the roads under other sections of the act, authorizing loans out of the revolving fund set aside by congress.

CHAIRMANSHIP OF SHIPPING BOARD

Offered James A. Farrell. According to Reports.

Washington, March 14.—The chairmanship of the United States shipping board, under the new administration, has been offered to James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation. It was reported here today, in authoritative circles.

CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT

Expressed by a Vote of the German Reichstag.

CABINET IS GIVEN FREEDOM TO ACT

Can Deal with Indemnity Matter Without Handicap.

All Parties Are Urged To Support the Present Ministry in Its Efforts To Meet the Situation in Germany.

Berlin, March 14.—The vote of confidence in the German cabinet by the Reichstag gave it a free hand today, to deal with the new indemnity situation created by the allies' occupation of Dusseldorf, Duisburg and Ruhrort.

Dr. Trimborn, leader of the Center party, during the debate in the Reichstag, which preceded the vote of confidence, urged all parties to support the present ministry, adding:

"Neither this government nor any other can carry out the allies' indemnity demands as formulated at Paris."

Dr. Trimborn emphasized Germany's desire to rebuild northern France with her own money and her own architects.

"Our vote of confidence was given to the German cabinet, not to Dr. Walter Simons, the foreign minister," said Count Westarp, leader of the German Nationalists.

Even the first indemnity proposals tendered by Dr. Simons at London did not have the approval of the German experts. It is lucky for us that the allies did reject both sets of German counter-proposals.

Count Westarp urged the government to take the view that the allied penalties abrogated the treaty of Versailles.

Count Westarp Talks.

Count Westarp said there should be no more negotiations between Germany and the allies on reparations, until the three Rhine towns last week, are evacuated. Furthermore, he urged that the government hold up payments for the support of the allied occupational troops.

"The German government must change its propaganda on the question of war guilt," declared Count Westarp. "We must hammer into the world's mind that Germany was not responsible for the war."

"The history of the war began with the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine," said Dr. Breitscheid, leader of the Independent Socialists, in reply to the declaration of Count Westarp.

"We Germans bear the moral guilt of the war," he continued. "It is my duty and our duty to tell Count Westarp that he falsifies when he says that there is no shadow of war guilt upon Germany."

Majority Socialist speakers attacked the government for large money disbursements to the exiles.

AFFAIRS OF STATE ARE LAID ASIDE

President Harding Attends Church and Rests Sunday.

Washington, March 14.—Wearied by a week given over to an almost continuous round of conferences, President Harding, yesterday, cast aside the cares of the office and rested.

Accompanied by Mrs. Harding, the president attended the morning service at Calvary Baptist church, and after dining with a few intimate friends as guests, strolled through the White House grounds and took a long automobile ride.

The church was crowded, word having spread that President Harding would attend the service, and hundreds unable to gain admittance, waited outside to get a glimpse of the chief executive.

Doctor J. Stanley Burke, president of Howard university, occupying the pulpit, expressed the belief, both in his prayer and sermon, that the nations of the world, including "distracted" Russia, would come to a common understanding, insuring perpetual peace. His prayer contained a request that the president and his cabinet be guided divinely in solving domestic and international problems.

SIX EXECUTED THIS MORNING

Young Sinn Feiners Go to Death in Mount Joy Prison.

EXECUTIONS CAUSE GREAT AGITATION

End Talk of Further Peace Negotiations in Dublin—Men Convicted of Murders.

Dublin, March 14.—Six young Sinn Feiners were executed at Mount Joy prison, this morning, for complicity in attacks upon crown forces in Ireland.

Thomas Wheelan and Patrick Moran, who were convicted of participating in the killing of British officers in this city, November 21—"Bloody Sunday"—were executed first.

The executions caused a tremendous sensation and have had the effect of quelling talk for further peace negotiations, for the time being.

Business was at a standstill. Even the postoffice was closed. Outside of Mount Joy prison, thousands were gathered. Many knelt in prayer and the sobs and cries of lamentation filled the air.

Inside the prison, within a few hundred feet of the spot where the six condemned men met their death, was Arthur Griffith, Sinn Fein member of parliament, vice president of the Irish republic and head of the Sinn Fein organization. He is a prisoner.

Attempts to secure a reprieve for the six republicans failed. Word was received from London, early today, that the home office and the Irish office would not interfere. The authorities then made the final arrangements for the executions. It was decided that the men should be killed in pairs, beginning at 6 o'clock. After Wheelan and Moran, two others of the condemned men were ordered to their doom at 7 o'clock and an hour later—at 8 o'clock—the final couple met death.

The highest feeling was aroused over the execution of Moran, who was formerly head of the union of grocery clerks in Dublin. His friends declared that he had been convicted before a British military court on the flimsiest kind of evidence and that the testimony of his friends, who swore to an alibi, was disregarded.

Wheelan has two brothers in the United States. One of them is said to be a soldier in the American army. He was accused of shooting an English officer to death, the morning of "Bloody Sunday," but evidence was given at the court-martial that he was attending mass at the time he was alleged to have committed the murder.

The other four condemned men, Thomas Bryan, Bernard Ryan, Frank J. Flood and Patrick Doyle, were accused of participation in an ambush of British soldiers and policemen.

The scenes about the prison presented the deepest tragedy and pathos. Some had erected biers, upon which candles burned, while corners prostrated themselves and wept and prayed.

At the gates.

Crowded close to the gates of the prison yards, was Mrs. Wheelan, aged mother of one of the doomed men. She had come all the way from Connemara, in Galway county, wearing the quaint costume of the peasant women of that district. Tears rolled down her wrinkled cheeks.

As the minutes passed, the tension continued on Page Fourteen.

ALLIED TROOPS MOVING FORWARD

Paris, March 14.—Reinforcements of allied troops are arriving continuously at Duisburg and it is believed that the allied military authorities are preparing to occupy the German city of Mulheim, said a despatch to the Petit Journal, today.

WORKERS TAKE STRIKE BALLOT

But Remain at Work in the Big Packing Plants.

WAGE CUTS AFFECT ABOUT 200,000 MEN

Reduction in Pay Is Put into Operation Today.

Government Officials, Packers and Labor Leaders Prepare for a Conference Looking to Mediation in Trouble.

Chicago, March 14.—Employees of packing plants in Chicago, Omaha, Sioux City and other packing centers remained at work, today, according to reports received here, despite the fact that wage cuts affecting approximately 200,000 workers were put into effect by the packers. No sign of a "runaway walkout" which had been feared, developed.

Locals of the various packing-house unions throughout the country were voting, however, in a national referendum to decide the attitude of the workers toward a strike. Dennis Lane, secretary to the Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workers of North America, said that the result of this referendum would be known by Friday.

While the workers were voting on the question of a strike, government officials, labor leaders and representatives of the packers were preparing for a conference in Washington, out of which it is hoped that plans for mediation of the controversy will grow. Two representatives of the packers and the two leaders of the workers will confer with two representatives of the government. It is expected this conference will be held in Washington, Friday.

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and secretary of Agriculture Wallace, it is reported here, will be the representatives of the government. This conference is being arranged by Secretary of Labor Davis.

Labor leaders, also, are mapping out a plan of action, in the event of a strike.

For Mediation.

Washington, March 14.—Secretary of Labor Davis announced today, that he is now preparing for a conference here between the packers and their employees to attempt mediation of the difficulties which threaten a strike in the packing industry. No date has been set for the meeting, but it will probably be held Friday.

Secretary Davis said that he has received wires from both parties agreeing to his proposal for mediation.

SOVIET CLAIMS FALL OF FORTS

Moscow Says Three Kronstadt Forts Are Recaptured.

OTHERS STILL FIRING ON THE "RED" FORCES

Engagement Renewed West of Petrograd Today.

Helsingfors Says That General Budenny, a "Red" Cavalryman of Note, Has Gone Over to Anti-Bolsheviks.

London, March 14.—The Moscow soviet claims the capture of three of the forts at Kronstadt from the insurgents, said an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Helsingfors, today. The Helsingfors correspondent of the Daily Express reported that firing had been resumed between the fortress of Kronstadt and forts on the mainland west of Petrograd.

An unconfirmed report was current at Helsingfors that General Budenny, whose cavalry formed the strongest unit of the "Red" army, had gone over to the anti-Bolshevik forces at Orel. General Budenny's cavalry corps played a spectacular part in the Russian drive against Poland, last year.

John Anti-"Reds."

Washington, March 14.—Seven thousand Bolshevik soldiers have gone over to the Kronstadt revolutionaries, according to advices to the state department, today. The report declared that there is imminent danger in the Kronstadt fortress for an indefinite siege and that all attempts to storm the fortress have been repelled. The casualties in Kronstadt are reported to be but twenty-four wounded.

Moscow, March 14.—[By Wireless to Berlin, March 14.]—"Our internal difficulties are connected with problems of demobilization, provisioning and fuel," said Nicolai Lenin in an address to the Communist party, today.

"We have committed blunders in distributing food supplies, that must be admitted. The food difficulties arose chiefly from the fact that we started the reconstruction of industry too soon, causing excessive decrees to be issued. We overrated the speed of progress."

"Agriculture is passing through a crisis, not only because of the hereditary left over from the old imperialist regime, but because the apparatus of the new government can be evolved only gradually, despite all our efforts."

"The most important political question is the relations existing between the Russian working class and the predominating peasant population."

ECONOMIC BLOCKADE THREATENED TODAY

Drastic Steps To Bring Germany to Her Senses.

London, March 14.—The threat of an economic blockade against Germany was made in the house of commons, this afternoon. Austin Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, while discussing the reparations recovery bill, said:

"Unless Germany cooperates in the payment of reparations, the allies will establish an economic blockade sufficiently severe to bring her to her senses."

HOUSE LEADERS EXPECT ACTION

Reorganization of Departments of State Near.

PASSAGE OF DUNN BILL WILL ASSURE CHANGES

Big Appropriation Bill and Other Measures Scheduled for Passage This Week.

Columbus, March 14.—House leaders expect the lower legislative branch, this week, to pass the Dunn bill, reorganizing state departments, the big appropriation measure, and other measures of major importance, except, possibly, the proposal that the state constitution be amended, at the November election, relative to taxation.

It will then be up to the senate whether the legislature will adjourn sine die, March 31, as provided for in a resolution adopted unanimously in the house, its resolution will be measured over to the senate, this evening.

Printed copies of the big appropriation bill will be placed in the hands of legislators, today, it is said. Hearings on the Dunn reorganization bill are to be held by the house reorganization committee, tonight, tomorrow, and Wednesday. It is planned to place printed copies of the bill, as amended by the committee, in the hands of the house members, Thursday and pass it Friday or Saturday.

A subcommittee is scheduled to report to the house judiciary committee, tonight, a proposed automobile and traffic code.

Witnesses are to be examined at a session to be held tomorrow morning by the joint legislative committee, probing the state highway department.

Besides the McCoy bill, prohibiting showing of crime in motion pictures, up for passage tomorrow afternoon, the house is expected to act, this week, upon a number of bills supported by friends of the uniform rule in taxation, seeking to place concealed property on the tax duplicate.

A vote on the question of passing the McCoy-Bender school teachers' tenure bill is expected in the senate, tomorrow afternoon.

The Gordon bill, authorizing rural justice of the peace to hear prohibition law violation cases originating in cities, and the Robinson bill, permitting inspectors to confiscate automobiles used in transporting liquors, are scheduled to come up for passage in the house tomorrow afternoon.

WM. Make Fight.

Cincinnati, March 14.—Western Ohio pottery manufacturers will fight to prevent passage of a bill, now pending in the state legislature, seeking to prohibit the use of material gas for industrial purposes. They will cooperate in an effort to defeat the measure which is designed to prevent factories from using gas.

A Great Record.

Wheaton, March 14.—A Holstein Jersey three-year-old cow, Catherine Beauty Postle, owned by W. S. Oldman, of Wheaton, has made an official record of 22.25 pounds of butter and 98.4 pounds of milk in seven days, and 1,025 pounds of milk in 25 days. She gave 75 pounds of milk in one day.

STATE TROOPS TO BE REMOVED

May Be Taken from Springfield Without Delay.

MILITARY AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES MEET

Find City Quiet and No Trouble in Sight.

Over a Score of Prisoners Are Arraigned in Court, Charged with Complicity in Riots. Some Have Weapons.

Springfield, March 14.—Although indications, this afternoon, are that state troops will be held here at least until sometime tomorrow, the situation will remain an uncertainty until determined at a conference between state military and local civil authorities, to be held today.

There is no change in the situation which has prevailed during the past forty-eight hours.

The conference, this afternoon, also, are to decide whether any of the restrictions which have been in force during the past two nights will be lifted, tonight, and to decide whether a special grand jury shall be called to act upon developments growing out of the racial disturbances.

Over a score of prisoners, mostly boys, rounded up during the past several nights, were rearraigned in police court today. Charges included carrying concealed weapons, disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace.

City Is Quiet.

Springfield, March 14.—Because of the continuing satisfactory situation here, it is expected that a conference between state military and local civil authorities will be held today. When the question of withdrawing state troops from the city will be discussed.

Although the situation during the night was designated as "peaceful," police and state military patrols responded to six heavy calls. Four young white men, none of them possessing weapons, were held for investigation. The charge of planning to incite a riot may be placed against them.

Drunk stores were permitted to remain open after dark and churches were allowed to hold night services. These were the only exceptions to the order barring citizens from the streets after 8 p. m. and prohibiting public gatherings. Street cars did not operate after 7 p. m.

The same military and police precautions were observed as prevailed Saturday night.

City hospital authorities stated that eleven-year-old Margo Portenau, whose injuries, due to a criminal assault by an unknown negro, precipitated last week's racial disturbances; Pauline Joseph Ryan, shot by James White, negro, and Shirley Shaffer, negro, wounded, are all recovering.

Local pastors urged their Sunday audiences against doing anything that might lead to a race riot. Shortly all the ministers dwelt upon the racial outbreaks which resulted in sending of state troops to Springfield three times during the past seventeen years.

VERSAILLES IS QUIET AFTER A LYNCHING

Negro Slayer Hanged by Mob in a Kentucky Town.

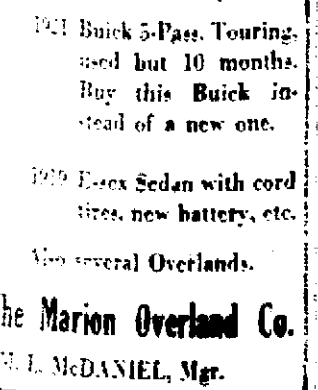

Versailles, Kentucky, March 14.—Versailles is quiet, today, following the lynching of Richard James, a negro, charged with the murder of Ben T. Rogers and Homer Reed, and so whose guilt a jury disagreed, Saturday and was discharged by Circuit Judge A. L. Stout.

James was taken from the Woodford county jail and hanged to a tree at a crossroads two miles from town, by an armed mob, yesterday. Four men went to the jail and after threat of force removed the negro from Jailer John T. Edgar. They then went to the cell and removed their prisoner, after a brief fight.

Feeling ran high Saturday afternoon, following the failure of the jury to agree upon the murder penalty for the slayer of the two men. All jurors favored a verdict of guilty, but one stood out for life imprisonment.

Market Unsettled.

New York, March 14.—After playing a steady game all morning, the stock market became unsettled and many heavy losses were sustained. The oil and steel shares continued the heavy loss.

RESULTS REMARKABLE SAYS NEW YORK MAN

Prominent Rochester Citizen
Tried Ten Years to Get Relief
but Tanlac Is Only Thing That Helped Him.

One of the latest to testify regarding the powers of Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results, is James J. Beasley, 192 Elmwood Avenue, Rochester, New York. Mr. Beasley has been chief record keeper for the Department of Water Works, city of Rochester, for thirty years and is a well known and highly respected citizen. In referring to the remarkable recovery of his health by the use of Tanlac, Mr. Beasley said:

"I have been trying for ten years to find relief from a case of dyspepsia. Nothing ever helped me to amount to anything until I got Tanlac. That is saying a great deal, for I did everything it seems that a man could do to find relief. Of course, I was hardly ever sick enough to go to bed and was most always able to keep going, but I just never felt right. At times during those ten years, my stomach would become sour like vinegar. I would have an uncomfortable bloated feeling after eating that would last for hours. I suffered a great deal from nausea. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate and I would become alarmed over my condition. My nerves were on edge all the time, and I became irritable, nervous and restless. I had no strength or energy to do anything. In fact I wasn't like myself at all. Even a week or two ago it was an effort for me to get out of my chair and I felt as stiff and clumsy as an old work horse. "It is really remarkable what Tanlac has accomplished in my case. It has relieved me entirely of indigestion. I never have that distressing feeling any more after eating, and I feel perfectly fine in every way. I will always feel grateful for what this wonderful medicine has done for me and I am only too glad to give it my heartiest endorsement." Tanlac is sold in Marion by the Humble Pharmacy, in LaGrange by Siffrin's, and in Waldo by Apt Pharmacy.—Adv.

Freight Clerical Force of Erie Is Reduced.

BUT PLATFORM WORKERS
AT TRANSFER ARE NOT

Tie and Rail Brevities Picked Up in Local Yards and Elsewhere.

Effective April 15, the Erie Railroad company will reestablish the salaries in effect April 30, 1926, for all employees except conductors, engineers, firemen, brakemen, switch tenders in yards, track foremen and piece workers. A notice to this effect was sent out by President F. D. Underwood today.

The force of platform workers at the transfer has not been reduced, and the work at the present is heavier than at this time last year. As cut in the clerical force at the freight house was made necessary this morning on account of lack of business, several employees being laid off.

C. W. Kippert and J. H. Avery, out of the Erie claim office in New York, are looking after business of their postment in the city.

B. F. Pierce, traveling freight agent of the Hocking Valley and Mr. Spaeth, out of the Columbus offices of the company, were looking after business in local railroad circles, this morning.

F. E. House, superintendent of the Cincinnati division of the Erie; H. D. Row, division engineer, and M. Stonelaker, the chief clerk in the latter's office, are in Chicago attending a staff meeting of the Erie officials of the Chicago region.

Today was pay day for the local employees of the Hocking Valley and the Erie for the last half of February.

E. C. Robbins, first trick dispatcher of the Cincinnati division of the Erie, is laying off today.

Erie train, No. 7, tonight will carry an extra sleeper out of Marion on account of the heavy traffic for the signal appliance meeting in Chicago.

MAGNETIC SPRINGS HOTEL RECEIVERSHIP IS OK

According to Judge Cameron's Decision at Marysville.

Holding that the appointment of a receiver for the Park Hotel at Magnetic Springs was legal and that the parties to the suit were not parties in the real estate or personal property, but were each entitled to fifty per cent of the profits, Judge Cameron, in the Marysville common pleas court, has given his decision in the suit for an accounting of Edward S. Grandstaff against Christopher Magee, Jr. The plaintiff in the suit was lessee and the defendant owner of the hotel.

Suit for an accounting was brought by Grandstaff in the fall of 1920, after which Sheriff Charles A. Legerit was appointed receiver. Grandstaff later was ordered to make an accounting to Magee and this was done by Raymond Belcher, of Columbus, formerly of Marion. The account covers hundreds of typewritten pages. Grandstaff died a few months after the suit for an accounting was brought.

Judge Cameron's decision is of considerable length and goes into the business transaction of the two men covering a period of five years.

ALIEN MINDS POISONED.

Former Postmaster General Burleson had the satisfaction of having his action in excluding from the mails the Milwaukee Leader, the paper owned by Victor Berger, considered of violation of the espionage laws, upheld by the supreme court. The Leader was denied mail privileges on the ground that articles printed were intended to create opposition to the government of the United States and to hinder this nation in operations during the war. Editorial in the Leader led to the conviction of Berger.

While matter printed by the Leader and other anti-government papers come under the ban of the espionage law, a wartime measure designed to curb efforts to hinder our part in the war, the same incentive to repudiation of the law is being carried on by radical newspapers, now that the espionage law has been repealed.

There has been the sporadic outbreaks of radicalism in the United States as long as the editors of anti-American publications and speakers on the street corners are permitted to preach their unpatriotic sentiments. The minds of thousands of aliens are poisoned against this government by the appeals made possible through the license granted to

Sketches from Life

"Got Any Detective Stories?"

A MUTUAL DEPENDENCE.

The country is hearing a great deal about the transportation situation, and it has come to know something of financial conditions affecting the railroads from the sharp increases in passenger and shipping rates. It is not surprising to be informed that the railroads are still running on an unprofitable basis.

One of the serious results of the slump in freight business of the railroads is the reduction in the number of employees in this branch of transportation. The Pennsylvania railroad alone having laid off many thousands of men since last December. The railroads have adopted the only business-like method of dealing with a situation over which they have no control. Congress has voted to pay to the railroad companies the larger part of the balance that is due on the government's guarantee in the federal management of the roads during the war, and this payment should have the effect soon of enabling the roads to improve rolling stock and prepare for the larger business certain to develop.

Manufacturers complain that the higher freight rates are having a serious effect in retarding the resumption of industry, and the roads complain that even present rates are unprofitable with the low volume of business.

In the transportation problem is found another illustration of the interlocking character of industry and business, and demonstrates that there can be no solution until all interests are ready to cooperate in making concessions that will be for the general welfare. Selfish demands for relief will only complicate a condition that has already reached serious proportions.

Of course, if beer with a kick is to be utilized for medicinal purposes, it's better than a million-to-one proposition that there is going to be a revival of snakebite epidemics.

"There are times," remarked the fellow who lives next door on the way down town this morning, "when I am inclined to feel that the perils which may face this country from without are not so much compared from the viewpoint of danger with hysterical-discussion of them from within."

About everybody save the New York World appears to be pretty well satisfied with the new cabinet, and in this connection it may be said without any betrayal of confidence that it probably wasn't selected for the purpose of satisfying the New York World.

FIRST "ALL-RUSSIA" REVOLUTION.

So many counter revolutions have failed in Russia that it would be presumptuous to declare that the present conflict will result in stabilized government for that great and unfortunate country. And yet there is warrant for hope.

This is the first wholly Russian protest against the Bolsheviks. It seems pretty well established that Kerensky, Kolchak, Semenov and, more recently, the gaunt Baron Wrangel, were Russian in form only and that back of them was the aid extended by foreign interests. When the Russians learned that "outsiders" were trying to tell them what government to have, they responded to the stimulus of nationalism and buried their immediate differences for the sake of resisting the "foreigner."

There appears to be no "outside" influences in the present protest against socialism. As nearly as can be told, this uprising comes spontaneously from the Russians themselves who, tired of the ludicrous mode of living imposed by the "Reds," have taken up arms against it.

There is little doubt that the world has failed in solving the Russian problem, but it should be remembered that only Russia could determine her own destiny. It is to the credit of America that after a time it resorted efforts to draw it into a campaign to use force to tell the Russians what to do. That's a problem properly for the Russians to settle and if they are settling about to do it, it means a more peaceful and more certain future for our nation and a more peaceful relation with the other nations of the world.

LIFE'S VAUDEVILLE.

[By James Earl Taylor]

WHAT HAVE YOU READ?

How many of our friends and acquaintances would select our reading matter for us? If our literary tastes do not square with theirs—they would alter ours.

What magazines do you take?
 For what papers do you subscribe?
 What books do you own?
 Who is your favorite poet?
 Who is your poet novelist?
 Do you read this paper?
 Do you read that journal or review?
 Have you read "So-and-So's" article in the "Such-and-Such" publication?

These are a few of the many questions they ask us.

And if our answers are not satisfactory to them, if our tastes do not correspond to theirs, they look disappointed, hurt; and, forthwith, they proceed to tell us where we are all wrong, and to set us right.

They take the Menace, perhaps. Then, we should take it, they tell us. They read the Outlook, maybe. Then we should read it, they inform us. Or they swear by the Dearborn Independent. So should we, consequently. They like Harold Bell Wright's books. So must we, of course. They profess to admire free verse. We must profess the same admiration. They love Amy Lowell. We must be enamored of Amy.

And thus it goes. All of which leads us up to the following illustrative anecdote—from the San Francisco Argonaut:

An Irishman recently went before a recruiting sergeant, who tried to "kid" him.
 "Have you read the Declaration of Independence?" the sergeant asked.
 "I hav not," said Pat.
 "Have you read the constitution of the United States?"
 "I hav not, sir."
 The sergeant looked sternly at the applicant, and asked:
 "What have you read?"
 Patrick hesitated but the fraction of a second before replying:
 "I hav red hairs on me neck."

What have you read?

WRONG IN THE HEAD.

If you found upon the street a purse containing a large sum of money, would you seek to restore it to its owner?

If a tradesman should make a mistake in giving you your change, after you had made a purchase at his place of business, would you call his attention to the fact?

I your employer should inadvertently overpay you, would you apprise him that he had done so? Maybe you would—maybe you wouldn't.

If you would do these things—if you do—do these things—are you normal or abnormal, according to present day mental and moral standards?

I hardly know; I sometimes have my doubts when I see what I see going on in the world. Take the following illustration from the Edinburgh Scotsman:

A north countryman, charged with having set fire to a large haystack, was defended on the ground that he was not altogether responsible for his actions. One of the witnesses testified to the belief that the prisoner was "wrecked in his head."

"Can you mention any occasion on which the prisoner behaved in a manner to warrant your statement?" he was asked by the learned counsel.

"Yes," answered the witness. "Once, at work he got half a crown too much for his wages, and—"

"Well," said the counsel, as the witness hesitated.

"He took it back to the manager," concluded the witness.

CHURCH SOCIETIES

Eighty New Members.
Eighty new members, approximately half of them heads of families, were publicly received in connection with the communion service at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning. There were twenty adult baptisms and the communion service was probably the largest ever held in the church. The church was filled and the congregation overflowed into the Sunday-school room and balcony. Other members will be received in the church Easter Sunday morning.

Willing Workers.
The Willing Workers' class of the First Reformed Sunday-school, met at the home of Miss Lillian Mario, of East George street, Friday evening, with fifteen members and several visitors in attendance. A social hour followed the business session.

Sunshine Class.
Miss Almeta Slack was hostess to the members of the Sunshine class, of the Forest Lawn church, Saturday afternoon, at her home on north Grand avenue. The time was passed with games and in a contest the awards were given to Miss Eva Ballard and Lloyd Jackson. Miss Edith McMurray was a guest. Tiny shamrocks were given as favors at the tea hour.

Blue Bird Class.
The members of the Blue Bird class, of the Calvary church, were entertained Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Ruth Hinaman, of Frederick street. There was a good attendance and the afternoon was passed in sewing carpet rags. Miss Mary Harris was a guest of the class.

At Trinity Church.
Sunday was observed as Missionary day at Trinity Baptist church, when Miss Harriet Smith, of Nan-Po, China, and Dr. T. I. Robbins, of New York City, told of their work in foreign fields. Miss Smith spoke Sunday morning following the regular services and told of the work being accomplished in China by the mission workers. Dr. Robbins, who passed some time in the mission fields of the Philippine Islands, gave an interesting talk on work in that field and also in India and Japan, Sunday evening.

St. Patrick's Social.
Final arrangements for the social to be given St. Patrick's night in Schwingler's hall were completed at the meeting of the Young Ladies' society, of St. Mary's church, Sunday afternoon in the Knights of Columbus hall. The entertainment will be given for the benefit of the new building fund for the new Knights of Columbus hall. Cards, dancing and a number of talks are scheduled for the evening's program.

Banner Attendance.
There was a banner attendance at the First Reformed Sunday-school morning and the offering, which marked the close of the pre-Easter financial campaign for the building fund, amounted to $1,526. Rev. A. L. Scherry preached on "The Cross, Day by Day," at the morning service and his topic in the evening was "Mary's Tribute of Devotion." Seventeen new members were taken in at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor society in the evening. A membership contest, to close Easter Sunday, is being conducted by teams in the society and it has been most successful so far.

At U. B. Church.
The services at the First United Brethren church Sunday were largely attended and the music was under the direction of B. K. Hill. The pastor, Dr. O. F. Laubach, spoke in the morning on "The Greatest Gift to the World," taking for his text John 3:16, and in the evening on "What I Do To Be Saved." This evening services will begin at 7:30 o'clock and the pastor will speak on "Sewing and Reaping."

Old Age Recognized.
A special recognition day was observed Sunday morning in the Sunday-school room of the Central Christian church. First recognition was given to the oldest man present, Everett Fields, of East Church street, who is ninety-two years of age, and to Mrs. Sarah Uncofer, the oldest woman present, who is eighty-one years of age. The youngest baby present was Bobby Sortman, aged ten weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Bert Woodruff and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Watts, both families of which were present with seven children, tied for recognition for having the largest families present.

Mrs. Jennie Boxwell, who resides five miles from Marion, received recognition for having come the farthest and Miss Zantha Haddick for being the first to arrive for Sunday-school yesterday. She came at 6 o'clock, but it was not long before others joined her and by 8 o'clock about fifty were there. The Sunday-school has an enrollment of 415 and yesterday the attendance was 395. Arrangements were made to give the young people of the church a St. Patrick's party Thursday evening in the basement of the church.

Feasts at St. Mary's Church.
The feast of St. Patrick will be celebrated with a high mass Thursday at St. Mary's church as will also the feast of St. Joseph, which falls on Saturday of this week. Both masses will be at 7:45 o'clock.

At Pite Memorial Church.
Dr. J. I. Robbins, of New York

City, spoke at the morning service Sunday at Pite Memorial Baptist church. Dr. Robbins is a returned mission worker and gave an interesting address on his work. Dr. Bruce Kinney, pioneer Indian worker of Colorado, spoke at the evening service. Both meetings were well attended. About 550 were realized on the Easter bazaar held by the members of the Missionary society, of Pite Memorial Baptist church, Saturday. The money will be applied to the church building fund. Beginning Wednesday evening revival services will be held at Pite Memorial church. The services will continue until Easter.

At Seventh-Day Adventist Church.
Evangelist Shellhaas spoke Sunday afternoon at the Seventh-Day Adventist church on the subject, "What Is Hell? Where Is Hell? When Is Hell?" The evangelist said, "The belief in an eternal hell is based on pagan superstitions. In the various religions of antiquity we find they have nearly all had their hell. The Bible itself which is our highest authority on this subject gives us ample evidence that hell means extinction and annihilation. We read that the wicked will be destroyed root and branch. John the Revelator speaks about the entire destruction of the wicked and that they shall suffer the second death. Eventually all sin and evil will be exterminated and the earth made new. Peter says we look for a new heaven, and earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. John says 'I beheld a new heaven and a new earth. The earth is to become the abode of the righteous and all evil annihilated.'"

International Holiness Church.
The all-day meeting at the International Holiness church was a real success. The pastor, Rev. J. T. Matfin, preached at both morning and evening. The subject in the morning was "Faith," and in the evening the subject was "The Judgment of the Sinner." Ten went to the altar at this service.

Rev. J. V. Cook of Marion, had charge of the praise service at 2:30 p. m. There were eleven seeking salvation at this service.

Revival meetings will begin at this church next Sunday and continue through three Sundays. Rev. George B. Kulp, of Battle Creek, Michigan, and A. H. Johnston, of Akron, will conduct it. Rev. Mr. Kulp is one of the distinguished holiness evangelists of this country, 250 being saved in his meeting in a Western state. Rev. Mr. Kulp is the general superintendent of the International Holiness churches in the United States. A. H. Johnston has sung in nearly all the large camps in the country. On the last five days of the meeting, March 30 to April 3, the ministers of the state will gather here for their mid-winter convention.

Notice.
Canby Lodge No. 51, K. of P., your presence is requested at lodge Tuesday evening, March 15. Third rank and special business. If you are not there you will miss something. By order of Chancellor Commander. Adv.

The "Easy" Is Here To Stay

The principle of washing clothes by air pressure and suction was first used in the "EASY" in 1877,—then a small hand-operated machine, which gradually developed until the adaptation of electricity made possible the present "EASY" VACUUM ELECTRIC WASHING MACHINE.

The demand from housewives for "EASY" VACUUM ELECTRIC WASHING MACHINES necessitated the erection of the largest and most modern Washing Machine Plant. (See illustration above.)

The "EASY" is operated by electricity. The two cups inside of tub wash the clothes by air pressure and suction. They move up and down sixty times per minute. On the down stroke, the air in the cups forces the soapy water through the mesh of the garments. On the up stroke, the suction of the cups draws the soapy water through the mesh. This harmless method forces water back and forth through the clothes sixty times per minute and removes all dirt or foreign substances without the least friction, rubbing or wearing of the clothes.

You can confidently trust your daintiest laces and lingerie, as well as your woolen blankets and flannels to the "EASY." It will wash them spotlessly clean. Won't you give the "EASY" a chance to do your next week's washing and let it convince you that it will do better work with less effort than any other washing machine.

CHICKENS IN NEIGHBORS' GARDENS, DOGS AT LARGE

No Longer Any Question About Spring Being Here.

Goodby, Winter! Goodby, Miss Spring! Beg pardon? Yes, we know that, according to the ancient custom, Winter won't really say goodbye until Miss Spring makes her bow March 20, but we repeat it: Goodby, Winter! Goodby, Miss Spring! We don't care what the dead live or may be, we know that Winter's back has long been broken. You may want to chop a chicken's head off the body, flop around quite bit when you throw it on the ground. Well, it's possible that Old Man Winter might flop around a bit yet, but we won't mind that whole lot, for we certainly have at the best of it this winter, and old Man Winter would have to go some now to give us the worst of it. But, understand, we are not joking about it—we're just giving our opinion.

Now, dear readers, we note that we have dropped carelessly into the use of that familiar "we," so you will pardon us again, please.

Here's some good news about spring's arrival: Complaints are being made to the police about chickens getting into the neighbors' gardens, and there are complaints, too, about dogs running everywhere.

MISS RUTH BROCKETT TO WED PAUL BAUER

Engagement Announced at Dinner Saturday.

At a very attractive dinner, Saturday evening, the engagement of Miss Ruth Brockett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. J. Brockett, of south Prospect street, and Mr. Paul Bauer, of Cleveland, was announced.

Miss Priscilla Smith was hostess at the dinner at her home on Mr. Vernon avenue, entertaining fourteen guests in Miss Brockett's honor. The cards bearing the announcement were concealed within nosegays of spring flowers, which were given as favors, and the news of the approaching marriage, which will be an event of June, came as a pleasant surprise. The table was prettily decorated in a color scheme of pink and yellow, carried out with tulips and jonquills.

Guests from out of the city were Mrs. Walter Myers, of Bellefontaine; Mrs. J. F. Corbin, of Columbus; and Miss Irma Brockett, who was home from Cleveland.

Miss Brockett has many friends here who will be pleased to learn of her approaching marriage. For three years, until recently, she was detained at St. Luke's hospital in Cleveland.

A Complete Showing of the Newest Furniture Creations

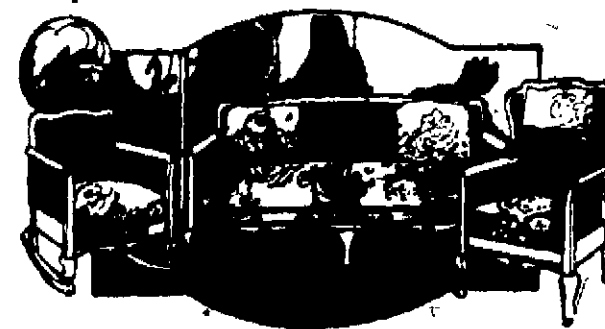

It is only within the last few weeks that the new designs in furniture have been coming from the manufacturers, and this is the first spring since before the war that we have had such a large and varied stock of strictly new patterns. During the past two weeks particularly we have placed on display hundreds and hundreds of beautiful new pieces of furniture.

Not only are these new styles more attractive than ever before but you will find them marked at prices that are lower than any seen since pre-war days. Wholesale furniture costs have been steadily dropping and now they have reached bed rock. If ever there was a time to buy the finest of furniture at a real saving, it is right now, at present low prices.

A Special Value in Dining Tables, $45.00

These handsome Colonial dining tables come with quartered golden oak 48-inch plank tops, and Monday's special price is the lowest we have seen these tables offered at for years. Just a small payment delivers one to your home and we will be glad to arrange terms to suit your convenience.

THIS NEW LIVING ROOM SUITE, $300

This splendid new living room suite is typical of the high character of the spring merchandise we have recently received from the manufacturers. It is carefully made in every respect with mahogany frames upholstered in a very fine grade of tapestry. The davenport has a cane back, is furnished with two pillows, and opens into a full sized bed. The price on this complete suite is absolutely rock bottom. It represents a most unusual value and one that you certainly want to take advantage of tomorrow. Convenient credit terms will be gladly arranged.

A Massive Brass Bed Only $36.00

This massive brass bed may be had in either Verano Martin or satin finish. It has massive 2-inch posts and 1 1/2-inch fillers. Formerly these beds sold at almost double this price but we have cut them to rock bottom for Monday. Six months ago we could not buy them wholesale at so low a price.

MARION MAN G. W. JENNINGS HIGHLY ENDORSES NUXITE

After Taking Nuxite, Marion Man Feels Fine. Most Wonderful Medicine in the World, He Declares.

I was in a badly run down condition, when I started taking Nuxite, but after taking Nuxite about ten days, I am feeling like a new man, said Mr. G. W. Jennings who lives at 329 Davis St., Marion, Ohio. And formerly run a grocery store. Continuing, Mr. Jennings stated, "While I was not sick in bed I was so badly run down for some time past, I just felt tired and worn out all the time and felt like not doing anything. My appetite was nothing like as good as usual. I did not feel right at any time and nothing I ate seemed to agree with me. I had no energy or ambition, and was sluggish and my work suffered. I did not rest well at night, and would roll and toss about in the bed."

"I had been reading so much in the newspapers about the good Nuxite was going to others. After studying several days I decided to give Nuxite a trial. I bought a bottle of Nuxite. I had finished taking one bottle and I noticed I was getting back to my former good condition. My appetite has returned. I can eat anything I want and all I want, without feeling any bad after effects."

"I am completely over that tired and worn out feeling and feel like I could do a good day's work without stopping. I am not so nervous. Sleep the every night. I am just going to take some more of Nuxite just to be sure I do not have a return of my trouble. It's without a doubt a great medicine and I advise everybody who feels as I did to take Nuxite."

Nuxite to which Mr. Jennings refers is being introduced at Schmidt's & Co. Drug Store, under the supervision of W. R. Cooper, the Nuxite man.—Adv.

"Snowball"

By WILLIAM FALL

© 1921, Western Newspaper Union

"We have been friends for a good many years, Lydia."

"And let us continue the same, Dan."

The scene was in the neat parlor of the village home of Miss Lydia Park. Her caller—and visitor—was Daniel Brackett, ten years a widower.

"I have waited a long time to ask you the question nearest to my heart," he went on. "I am disappointed, Lydia—had a little hurt."

"Indeed?" said Miss Lydia. "We can be straightforward with each other. I was the school girl friend of your dear wife. I am the friend of her dear son. I am the friend of her dear son. I will not answer that question until you have talked with Mr. Brackett, where he belongs—in your home and your love."

Daniel Brackett took up his hat and left the house. He was not only disappointed, but sad. Wilfrid, his boy, had been a wild, reckless lad. One night when he was a member of a Halloween party which wound up in an accidental fire, Mr. Brackett paid fifty dollars a moment's trouble for Wilfrid, and rescued him from the house.

"When you have earned that fifty dollars and repaid it," said the father sternly, "you may come back to your home. Not before."

That was six months since. From that day until this no word had come from the homeless lad. Forty miles away from Brandon, however, at the very hour when that important letter was in progress, young Wilfrid Brackett, brisk, happy-faced and light as a dollar, was making his way down a stretch of railroad, whistling merrily.

Wilfrid had "made good." Wilfrid stepped aside to allow a low moving freight train to pass him. Then he gave a great start as its last car swung around the long curve. He stared in sheer wonderment at the figure of a little girl not more than ten years of age, clinging to the top of the car ladder on one side of the car and holding up against its rounds.

"The mischief!" uttered the astounded boy. "She must be scared to death. The pluckiest girl I ever saw."

"See here, little girl," gasped Wilfrid. "What are you ever doing here?"

"Snowball!" was the single response.

"Who's Snowball?"

"She's our own dear cow. They're taking her away from grandma, who took in bed."

"And where is Snowball?" questioned the bewildered lad.

"She's in this car. I saw the man drive her in here from the cattle pen."

Just here the train took a sliding and halted. Wilfrid made the child limp down to the ground and rest her head arms, by telling her that he could "see about things."

A brakeman and another man came rolling from the caboose. They asked strongly at the pair. Wilfrid set to explain. The man with the shaven head smiled before the narrative as concluded.

"Poor little thing!" he said. "I'm sorry for her, but she don't understand how affairs stand. I'm a comable from the county seat. Mrs. Brackett owned some money, and there's execution out. I didn't want to disturb her by lying on her household, so I took the cow."

"And this brave little child followed her Snowball," said Wilfrid. "Oozer, the amount very much?"

"Forty dollars and costs," was the reply, with a sympathetic look at the lad. "I'd pay it out of my own pocket if I wasn't a poor man."

"I'll pay it, will you release a cow?" asked Wilfrid.

"Yes, and throw off my fees, gladly," replied the officer.

The officer wiped away a suspicious moisture from his eye as the little girl threw her arms around the neck of the snowy white animal, cried over a recovered pet, and then laughed a joy.

An enterprising reporter eagerly shared up the material for a good story, and when Wilfrid left the happy lad and her pet at their home, the rest were clicking an incident of human interest all over the county. The afternoon papers had it, including the Brandon Evening Telegram.

"I told you Wilfrid was worth while, knew he had the making of a grand in him—and what do you say?"

"Daniel Brackett?" demanded the cynic at the Brackett house at six o'clock that evening. She pointed to the newspaper she had brought with her on her impetuous, unceremonious visit.

"Yes," answered Mr. Brackett. "Wilfrid is a splendid boy."

"You start right out finding him," said Brackett, ordered the spinster sharply. "or I'll never speak to you again."

"Yes, father! Miss Parker!"

"Yes, father! Miss Parker!"

GARIS' BEDTIME STORIES

UNCLE WIGGILY AND WADDIE CHUCK.

(BY HOWARD R. GARIS.)
(Copyright 1931, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Once upon a time, when Uncle Wiggily, the bunny rabbit gentleman, was hopping about with just a pink, twinkling nose for company, he heard a voice saying:

"But what's the use of so much work, Daddy? Why can't I make just one hole and let it go at that? I don't want to spend all day digging!"

Uncle Wiggily stopped short beneath a mulberry bush, which he hoped soon to see begin leaving out for spring.

"I wonder who that is?" thought the bunny. "Maybe it's the Doctor Fox teaching a little boy how to dig a hole."

Uncle Wiggily knew he ought to be careful. If a fox were near, he peeked around the corner of the bush, and the bunny gentleman was very glad when he saw Waddie Chuck, the little groundhog boy, and his father near a pile of dirt.

"Good morning, Mr. Chuck," said Waddie. "Uncle Wiggily, as he polished his spectacles in the rubber end of his crutch and made a low and polite bow with his tail slit hat."

"What is going on this morning, that I hear talk of digging holes?"

"Oh, I am teaching Waddies to look out for himself," answered the old woodchuck gentleman. "He and Waddie, his brother, are getting to be quite large animal boys now, and they must soon have homes of their own."

"So I want them to learn how to dig burrows or underground houses for themselves."

"A very good idea," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Only I don't see any use in digging two doors to a burrow," spoke Waddie. "One door is all I'm going to make to my house. I can go in one door and come out the same door. I don't need two."

"All woodchuck houses have two doors," said Mr. Chuck. "And you must have two in yours, Waddie."

"Oh, it's such a lot of work!" whined Waddie. "I think one door will be enough!"

Just then Mr. Chuck looked up, and saw Uncle Wiggily looking at him over Waddie's back. And Uncle Wiggily's wink seemed to say:

"Let Waddie make one hole to his burrow. Then I'll teach him a little lesson."

So Mr. Chuck, understanding that Uncle Wiggily was going to play a little trick, said out loud:

"Very well, Waddie. Make your house with only one door, and we'll see what happens. I'll leave you now, for I must go to the store."

"And I'll go with you," said Uncle Wiggily, hopping off with the woodchuck gentleman.

"I'm only going to dig one door to my new house," said Waddie. "Two are such hard work!"

So as the father and Uncle Wiggily went on down the woodland path, Waddie began digging his burrow. He made one big wide front door, and, when he had finished, he patted the patly frozen earth to make a room for himself below the surface.

When Waddie had a nice large burrow, with only one door, all of a sudden, as the little groundhog boy was sitting outside, thinking how foolish two doors would have been, all of a sudden he heard a gruff voice say:

"Oh, ho! Here's where I get him! A nice, fat groundhog boy!" And with that, something with a big, bushy tail sprang at Waddie.

"Oh, no, Mr. Fox, you don't get me!" cried Waddie.

Down through the one door of his burrow leaped Waddie, and he hid far back in his underground house. But he heard a noise outside and a gruff voice said:

"Well, you can't get out, for you have only this one door. I'll stay here until you get so hungry you have to crawl out this way and then I'll grab you!"

Oh, how unhappy Waddie felt! "Dear, good kind Mr. Fox! Please

Out came Waddie Chuck.

Then the little groundhog boy started digging very fast.

"What are you doing?" asked the bunny gentleman.

"Making two doors to my burrow," was the answer. "If you had been a fox, and if I had two doors, I could have gotten away out of the second."

"That's so," said the bunny. And he helped Waddie dig the second hole.

JUBILEE'S PARTNER

Illustrations by Judd Mortimer Lewis

It was misting this morning when I got up and let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth but I do not care. I had not made out of sugar. My mother fussed at me for tracking up the kitchen when I brunk to the milk from milking the cow and her dotter, and my aut fussed because I forget to wash my face, but I did not care. A boy has got too many things to do to waste his time fussing all the time.

When two boys fuss they have a fight and it is all over in no time. When my father and my mother fuss about my mother wanting a new dress or about my father keeping a horse that is eating its head off, they fuss for about a week. But if my mother would reach over and give my father a pat on the eye and he would haul off and kick her out of the back door, that would settle it and they could be friends again.

My grandfather says that it is being married that make people fuss. He says they are all polite to each other till they get married. I think someone ought to tell Jeff about that before him and my aut get married.

When we had got out of school I went home to take my books home and there was not anybody home so I thought I would put the saddle I got from Mr. Waxmore to ride his horse with on our horse. But our horse is taller than M. Waxmore's horse and there is not anything to stand on to reach up, and a horse can not hold his back down for a saddle like he can his head for a bride! The saddle was heavy, so I got on the left over his back and pulled the saddle up with a rope, and when I had got it up I tied the stirrups over the back of it so they would not be in the way. Then I dropped it on his back and if he had stood still it would of been all right, but when it hit him he jumped and it fell off of him and he gave it a kick that sent it across the barn and made it hit the cow's dotter.

And then something slipped and I fell right down on his back, and off

and I fell right down on his back, and off

and I fell right down on his back, and off

and I fell right down on his back, and off

put a stick across and hang from it by my legs and pull the saddle up and lay it on him careful!

It was time to milk and feed the dummed brute when I got out. A camel kneeled down when a fella wants to get on him and an elephant lets a fella up but a horse has not got any sense. Jeff was coming so I had to go to bed early. My father seems to think that Jeff and my aut are things a little boy ought not to hear.

The great energy-food has three flavors!

Which Karo do you like best?

MANY who prefer a rather sweet syrup choose Red Karo, as it gives foods their fullest natural taste. Because it looks like honey, many like it as a spread for cakes and waffles.

Red Karo is a wonderful syrup for sweetening in cooking and baking. Karo-made cakes, cookies and raisin bread are perfectly delicious.

But as a table syrup—with a thick heavy body, that pours nicely, and yet does not soak into the breakfast cakes—you may perhaps choose Blue Karo or Green Karo. Green Karo, with its delicious maple flavor, is made with the highest grade pure maple sugar from Vermont and Canada.

The secret of nutrition in Karo

Perhaps you did not know that you cannot live long without Dextrose. Most foods you eat—such as bread, starchy vegetables, and all forms of sugar—have to be changed into Dextrose before your system can use them as energy foods. Karo is rich in pure Dextrose.

So Karo may almost be said to be a predigested food. These are scientific facts, supported by the very highest medical and food authorities.

Your Protection

Do not be deceived by any imitations which might look like Karo. The name "Karo" is on every can of original Karo—keep the it and be assured of full weight and highest quality.

Five Quick Effects

When you brush teeth in this way

This new way of tooth brushing brings five desired effects. Some are immediate, all are quick. A ten-day test, which costs you nothing, will clearly show you what they mean to you.

Leading dentists everywhere advise this new-day method. Millions now employ it. You see the results in glistening teeth wherever people gather. Now let your own teeth show them.

You must fight film

Brushing does not save the teeth if you leave the film. That's why well-brushed teeth so often discolor and decay.

Film is that vicious coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not and it, so very few people have escaped its damage.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the base of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So dental science has in late years sought ways to fight that film.

OLD ERIN'S CALL FOR BREAD IS HEARD HERE

Committee for Relief of Ireland
Gets Busy.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS
IS LAUNCHED TODAY

Thousands Thrown Out of Employment by Burning Factories—An Irish Appeal.

Marion's committee for relief in Ireland this morning started a campaign for funds for the relief of the women and children in the devastated sections of Ireland. The campaign is to continue the remainder of this week and the committee plans to make as thorough a canvass of the city as possible during the campaign period.

Marion's committee, which is working in conjunction with the American committee for relief in Ireland, was organized recently under the auspices of Marion Council No. 671, Knights of Columbus. A meeting of the committee was held Sunday afternoon in the Knights of Columbus hall. No definite amount has been set as a goal for Marion, but the committee is asking that all contribute as much as they can for the relief work.

Here's Committee.
Members of the committee are D. F. Molloy, chairman; Carl Werley, treasurer; A. J. Seckel, William P. Kelly, Daniel Lawler, Frank Mullee, John T. Coffey, Tony Corona, Fred O'Mara, Leo Cusle, Bernard Sullivan, Herman Kalkbrenner and Carl Ramroth.

In an appeal sent out by the American committee, it is stated that thousands of women and children have been driven to the pitiful refuge of the fields and open country in Ireland, Ballbrigan, Granard, Tralee, Templemore, Trim, Tobercurry, Lisburn, Thurles and numerous other towns and villages have been burned and in Cork alone acres of business buildings and homes have been wiped out by fire. The appeal states that thousands of workers have been thrown out of employment by the burning of factories and creameries and that the transportation system has broken down.

Why It's Formed.
"To meet this appalling situation and to cope with it before it reaches a point where it may menace the very existence of the Irish people," the appeal continues, "the American committee for relief in Ireland has been formed. This committee is a non-political and non-sectarian body, solely humanitarian in aim, which seeks the cooperation of all those in whom human suffering evokes sympathy."

"This American committee purposes to supply relief to the women and children in Ireland, without regard to political or religious distinctions, through trained relief workers, distributing foodstuffs, clothing, building material and medical stores, suffering and helpless."

"The suffering and the helpless in Ireland seek aid from the American people, who have never yet refused an appeal from the suffering and helpless. To relieve the bitter need of the Irish people the committee confidently appeals for aid to the humanity of America."

"Ireland is virtually the only place in the world where the destruction of resources has been continuous. Today industry is paralyzed in Ireland and the greater part of the white-bellied male population is leading a hunted and fugitive existence. If present conditions continue unrelieved the Irish race in Ireland faces virtual annihilation. We are confident that Americans of every class and creed will respond promptly to avert the terrible fate menacing a people to whom they are so closely bound by ties of kinship and of a common heritage."

Rev. James B. Montgomery, pastor of Calvary M. E. Church of Washington, who succeeds Rev. Henry N. Chapman as Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

MRS. RUSSELL B. LANDON DIES AT EIGHTY-FIVE

She Breaks Hip in Fall Two Weeks Ago.

Mrs. Sabina Landon, widow of Russell B. Landon, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Simmons, No. 575 Mound street, last midnight. She was eighty-five years of age and her death resulted from a fall two weeks ago in which she broke one of her hips. She had not been well for ten months.

Mrs. Landon was born October 27, 1835, in Virginia, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rodgers. She was married at Prospect, October 15, 1855, and had resided here fourteen years. She leaves the following children: Mrs. Libby Scott, of LaPorte; Mrs. Martha A. Woodring, of Akron; J. H. Landon, of Decatur; Arthur Landon, of Decatur; Mrs. Cora M. Daymude, of Marion; O. G. Landon, of LaPorte; and Mrs. George W. Simmons, of this city. Mrs. Landon also leaves two brothers and a sister, Joseph N. Rodgers, of LaPorte; Napoleon Rodgers, of Colorado; and Mrs. Sarah Ramsey.

The funeral will be held at the residence, Wednesday, Dr. J. D. Darling of the Wesley M. E. church, of which Mrs. Landon was a member, will officiate and interment will be made in the Prospect cemetery.

CITY IN BRIEF

In Honor of Birthdays.—The members of the Silver club and a number of relatives pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sargent of East Church street, Saturday evening, in celebration of their birthday anniversaries. A supper was enjoyed, after which the evening was passed with games and music.

Find Abandoned Auto.—A Buick roadster with license, No. 290,069, which was left standing on south Prospect street from Saturday evening until this morning, was taken to police headquarters to be held for the owner. There is a supposition that the machine may have been stolen and deserted.

More Work for Jobless.—In order to furnish employment for some of Marion's unemployed, work was started this morning under the direction of the sewer department on the six-inch sanitary sewer and twelve-inch storm water sewer on Benton place and Wilson avenue. The proposed improvement is 840 feet in length and twenty men were put to work on the job.

Attend Minion Funeral.—T. J. Lucas and daughter, Kathryn, of Silver street, are in Minion, Vinson county, where they are attending the funeral today of Mr. Lucas' brother-in-law, Thomas Sheehan, who died Friday. Mr. Sheehan, who was advanced in years, had been an invalid for some time. He is survived by his widow. Burial was made in the Minion cemetery.

Pleads Not Guilty.—Frank Grello, arrested at Akron for the theft of Natalie Maniac's automobile in this city, last August, was brought to Marion, Sunday, and arraigned before Mayor T. E. Andrews this morning on a charge of stealing the automobile valued at $1,345. The automobile, which was in the possession of Grello, was brought back by a man from the garage, the officer and prisoner accompanying him. Grello entered a plea of not guilty before the mayor and he will have a hearing later, stating that he had an attorney coming from Akron. An extra tire was lost from the machine on the Iberia road, between Gallon and Marion, and the police are making an effort to locate it.

Married Thirty-Seven Years.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Powelson were pleasantly surprised by their children and grandchildren Sunday at their home on Gind street. The day celebrated the thirty-seven anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Powelson's marriage. A dinner was served at noon, a feature being a large cake with thirty-seven candles. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Powelson and children, Herman, Helen Marjory and Eva May; of Mr. Oliver; Mr. and Mrs. Harley Powelson and children, Thelma, Earl and Clyde; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Powelson and children, Marguerite, Doris Jane and Avah Marie; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Postle and daughter, Ruby; Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hartley and daughter, Ma Linda Amilinda; Mrs. S. T. Carr, Mr. Joseph Night and Mr. Clay Powelson.

To Build Homes.—Bellairs, March 14.—Eastern Ohio miners' convention, in session here, adopted a resolution urging the state legislature to build a home for every married man in Ohio. The resolution declares that payment could be made to the state in the form of rent sufficient to cover the expense of the proposal. It was referred to the union's legislative agent. The miners also adopted a resolution calling for a six hour day as a means of providing steady work. This resolution was referred to the 1922 scale committee.

Killed by Officer.—Cleveland, March 14.—Herman Calcutt, inmate, known in sporting circles as Cal White, a boxer, was shot and instantly killed by H. A. McGath, dance hall policeman, late last night. The shooting followed an argument with the officer, according to reports.

WIFE IN REFORMATORY, STABNER GETS DIVORCE

Husband Also Awarded Custody of Five Children.

MRS. JOHN E. HORNBECK
GETS HER MAIDEN NAME.

Divorced from Husband on the Ground of Immorality Saturday Afternoon.

George Stabner, Saturday, in the common pleas court, was granted a divorce from Mabel Alice Stabner on the ground of gross neglect. The custody of the five minor children was awarded to the plaintiff and the defendant was barred from interest in the plaintiff's property. The costs were adjudged against the plaintiff.

Mrs. Stabner is now serving a sentence of one year in the Marysville reformatory, having been found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of her children.

Restored to Maiden Name.
Leona J. Hornbeck Saturday afternoon in the common pleas court was granted a divorce from John E. Hornbeck on the ground of immoral conduct. The costs were adjudged against the defendant and the plaintiff was restored to her maiden name of Shiley. The decree was withheld for sixty days.

Amended Petition.
Dismissal of the claim for damages for personal injuries without prejudice to the bringing of another action is contained in an amended petition filed in the common pleas court Saturday afternoon in the case of William H. Schaffner against the board of county commissioners of Marion county.

In the original petition the plaintiff sued for $4,300 for damages to his automobile and personal injuries growing out of an accident July 2, 1919, when his machine ran into a ditch on the Green Camp pike. The amended petition asks for only $1,300 alleged damages to the automobile. Copeland & Thompson represent the plaintiff.

Leave Is Extended.
Further leave to plead by March 26 has been granted the defendant in the suit of Annabelle Thibaut against Thomas H. Smith and Dr. Philmore Young. The suit is an action to set aside the will of Anna G. Salmon.

Case Is Settled.
The case of William Kelly Martin against J. Ralph Forrey and others was settled without record in the common pleas court, this morning. Martin sued for $25, with interest from October 15, 1919, alleged due him as a bonus for working for Forrey brothers.

Receives Four Prior Then.
Suit against the Washford Baking company for $668.25 alleged damages was filed in the common pleas court Saturday afternoon by the Washburn-Crosby company.

The plaintiff states that October 14, 1920, the defendant purchased by written order, 340 barrels of flour at $11 a barrel. The petition states the flour was shipped, but the defendant refused to receive the merchandise or pay for it. The Washburn-Crosby company claims it was obliged to resell the flour at great expense and at a price $668.25 less than the price the baking company is said to have contracted for. Scofield, Durtée & Harder represent the plaintiff.

To Quiet Title.
A decree to quiet title as prayed for was granted the plaintiff in the common pleas court this morning in the case of Oliver Curtis Walters against Alexander Gillespie and others. The suit involved the title to 280 acres of land in Montgomery township.

Scheme To Keep Property from Hands of Speculators.

Lorain, March 14.—Toledo and Columbus men on really board are reorganizing 222 United States ship-building houses here, with a view to selling them to individuals at appraised value, on installment plan with fifteen per cent. down payment. The houses are valued at $1,350,000 and the highest bid, which had been rejected, was $150,000, or $1,500,000 less than the cost of construction. The property is valued at a little under $1,000,000. The action of the shipping board keeps the government houses out of the hands of speculators.

For New Records.
Dayton, March 14.—Aviators at McCook field have started again to seek new altitude records. Lieutenant John MacCready, accompanied by a field sergeant, is trying to pierce the topmost aerial ceiling in a La Perre, equipped with a Liberty motor. March 10, he was well on his way when 28,000 feet up, the breaking of an oil line put the super-charger out of order and he had to come down. Major R. W. Schroeder, who retired several months ago, was the former flyer who continually tried for altitude records.

GOVERNOR MORROW OFFERS A REWARD

Wants Members of Frankfort
Mob Brought to Trial.

Frankfort, Kentucky, March 14.—Governor Edwin P. Morrow today offered $500 reward, exact, for the arrest of members of the mob that took Richard James, negro, from the Versailles jail, yesterday and hanged him for the killing of two men. The jury in the case found the negro guilty, but failed to agree as to his punishment. James confessed to the killings before being strung up by the mob.

Governor Morrow declared that "lynching must end in this state. This is an outrage against law and order and immediate investigation of those responsible for the mob action will be made."

Governor Morrow stated that a rigid investigation of the activity or inactivity of the sheriff and of Jailor Edwards would be made. Edwards was unable to identify any of the members of the mob who removed the negro from his keeping.

Too Much Tobacco

After Forty-Five

Suicidal, Says Doctor

Immoderate use of tobacco after forty-five is suicidal, says Dr. Hirschfeld, eminent medical author, and other doctors agree with him. Excessive use of tobacco is bad for anyone, any time, and how much you can stand can only be told after it is too late if you have used too much. Better to quit, and here Nicotol will help you. Get a few Nicotol tablets from any druggist and let them drive the craving from you. If you want to resume after seeing how much better you feel without tobacco you can do so at any time. Nicotol is sold under a positive money-back guarantee. It costs you little to quit and nothing if Nicotol fails. Note: If you know you are smoking too much let Nicotol help you reduce the quantity and show you how easy it is to quit altogether. Ask your druggist about the success of Nicotol. He knows and can be trusted to tell you the truth.—Adv.

Many Seek Short Cuts to Wealth Without Paying the Price

FAR too many people want diamonds, decollette gowns, tailored suits and silk shirts without first being willing to use alarm clocks, aprons, overalls and flannel shirts. There is too much envy of wealth and too little willingness to work for it.

Hard work and regular savings taken from meager salaries, with the interest earned, have enabled many a poor man to acquire riches. Rockefeller, Carnegie, Schwab, Woolworth, and many of the world's richest men started with nothing except determination to work hard and save regularly.

Those who spend freely usually end chained to their jobs. Those who save regularly win final freedom. Begin now—open a Savings Account at this bank and save some from every pay.

Now and Again That "Cave Man Stuff" Does Win and Jimmy Certainly Did Play His Hand for All It Was Worth, Emerging a Full Fledged Hero

THE lights of the city had not been twinkling for more than ten minutes and the last stroke of the big clock in the tower had barely finished vibrating through the warm June air before the stream of humanity began to trickle out of the rambling emporium's entrance to the big store.

Like particles of water emerging from the nozzle of a fountain, they rushed forth and scattered in all directions and disappeared in the twilight.

But not so Jimmie McMahon. He took a long whiff of the fresh evening air, then a long whiff of his cigarette; and then his little figure dodged and squeezed its way to the side of the building a few feet away from the nozzle of the human fountain, and his serious eyes began to scan anxiously every face that shone for a second under the twilight above the door; every face, that is, which had a small fuzzy hat above it and a soft white neck beneath it.

A pathetic sight was Jimmie, with his native air of unconcern, scowling back at the knowing smile or the innuendo or raised eyebrows of passing store acquaintances. For Jimmie was hopelessly in love, and—worse to him, unluckily—hopelessly bashful. And better, oh, far better, to have loved and lost than to have loved and been too bashful. Irene was her name. Jimmie had known her for three months, loved her for a quarter of a year, and wanted to marry her for the last ninety days.

As he looked at himself from afar to consider his prospects, he took the outlook by no means discouraging. He was twenty-four, of pleasing countenance; got out the type girls dream of after reading Jack London. He stood about five feet six, was of very slight build, and of quiet and conventional habits. Financially, he felt that he could class himself—well, as eligible, providing the cost of living indulged in no more extravaganzas. He had been in the store for six years, and had gone up and down from a cash boy on the tenth floor to a silk salesman on the first.

His paramount deficiency, he recognized, was the curse, for it was a curse to Jimmie, of slavish conventionality and most abominable timidity. Some girls would have dismissed him with a shrug, and "Jimmie? Aw, say, he's as slow as molasses!" while others might have said, "Mr. McMahon? Why, he's very nice, but—"

The crowd kept pouring out, and finally she came, staring all about her with a pair of big brown eyes as if she were entering a new world. Her hair was soft and dark brown, and her cheeks were tinted just a little with the pink of perfect health. She wasn't very big, and she was dressed in a dark blue suit and a small blue hat.

Irene sold perfumes, and perhaps the sweet odors had affected her disposition; for it is not every girl who, after working hard all day, will come out ready to go home to her lonely room on the top floor of a boarding house, with a smile on her face. Yet smiling she was as she came out of the entrance, but then maybe (maybe, I say, for man's mind is but infinite) it was because she caught sight of Jimmie gazing at her in mute admiration.

With extended hand she came forward to greet him.

"Hello, Jimmie!" she said with a cheery smile. "Gee, ain't it grand out here, after wallowing around among a thousand bottles of violet and heliotrope colognes all day?"

Jimmie threw away his cigarette to facilitate speech.

"It's great, all right—this June air. I wanted to see if you'd mind if I went home—that is, I mean—are you going home?"

Irene laughed.

"Why, sure, Jimmie; only we can't talk much in that mob in the subway, and I got a lot to tell you about that new floor-walker we got upstairs."

Irene was right. It is an indisputable fact that you can't talk very much in a crowded, roaring subway car. But you can watch the delicate curve of a girl's arm as she swings back and forth on a strap, and you can gaze into her big eyes darting up and down the car. Even if they meet yours occasionally and look down and feel yourself growing very red—well, it's worth it.

"I was going to ask you, Irene," began Jimmie, when they emerged at last from that tube of cosmopolitan odors and sounds, "if you want to come to the movies tonight. Donald Devilish is there, you know."

Irene was positive that it would be just grand. She worshiped movies. She adored Donald Devilish. Jimmie winced a little at this. Donald was six feet two, and had the habit of thoroughly demolishing three or four villains of equal size in the last reel, while Jimmie lacked eight inches of the idol's height, and even a pacifist could not call him belittled.

Later, as they sat side by side in the gloom of the theatre, Jimmie cursed his bashfulness more vehemently than ever. There were fifteen minutes of "Our Insect Friends and How They Live," which struck no sympathetic chord in either of their natures; yet, search as he would, no topic of conversation would present itself to Jimmie's mind; and they sat in silence. Her hand, very white and inviting looking, lay idle in her lap. Slowly and tremblingly, he forced his own to within six inches—and back to his watch chain again.

On the screen, Donald was breaking branches and riding fifty and sixty miles with the nonchalance of a Broadway cowboy. Jimmie stole a glance at Irene. She was staring in wide-eyed fascination. He slunk down in his chair and tried to look at the picture.

Donald Devilish was in his prime that evening. Throughout the theatre female hearts fluttered, female hearts heaved. Men grunted critically but were forced to admire. A cold, heartless, affected creature from the city was paying a visit to his 500,000-acre ranch in New Jersey. Immediately after lunch in New Jersey, and Donald fell in love. She spurned him, and dismissed his advances with careless unconcern.

"S'death! There's no way to treat a man with such a heart as that!" bawled Donald's cowboy sport again. Riding among his 2,000,000 head of cattle last day, our hero vowed that he must be his. That evening he met her riding alone. "Go back!" he commanded, sternly. "You are from the ranch house—and there are rattlesnakes here—rattlesnakes and Indians."

"Who are you that you should dictate to me?" glared the high-spirited maiden. Taunted beyond endurance, Donald dragged her from her pony, bound her head and feet, and came down the street the darkness would swallow him.

"Who's Mr. McMahon?" said a cheery voice. Like a criminal hearing the constable's call, Jimmie turned.

"Miss Irene Kirby," he murmured in an unnatural tone.

"She's upstairs," the crowdmaster informed him. "Come inside and I'll call her."

"She's in my line of work," he said, and Jimmie, who you never see, I'll be up and see if she is ready."

He took a deep breath, nervously tossed a half-finished cigarette into a corner and started to mount the stairs. His heart sank as he climbed. But if it was hard going up, what would it be coming down?

He knew that to hesitate meant to fail, yet like the mouse making his first leap, he tion, he must compel his backward self to resort to brute force. Besides, "It's better than all the rest of that stuff."

He practiced scowling in front of the mirror, raised his arm to feel his muscles, pulled himself up to all his sixty-six inches, took a deep breath, tried not to be conscious of the abnormal beating of his heart, slammed the door and went out.

IT WAS a warm evening, but a refreshing breeze had by some miracle found its way into the narrow side street. It was a few minutes past seven, and she would just have finished supper and gone to her room to do some sewing. He walked swiftly on, still cultivating an awe-inspiring appearance by frowning intensely at the passers-by. As a supreme test he approached a huge policeman, whose downy face in the darkness would swallow him.

"Who's Mr. McMahon?" said a cheery voice. Like a criminal hearing the constable's call, Jimmie turned.

"Miss Irene Kirby," he murmured in an unnatural tone.

"She's upstairs," the crowdmaster informed him. "Come inside and I'll call her."

"She's in my line of work," he said, and Jimmie, who you never see, I'll be up and see if she is ready."

He took a deep breath, nervously tossed a half-finished cigarette into a corner and started to mount the stairs. His heart sank as he climbed. But if it was hard going up, what would it be coming down?

He knew that to hesitate meant to fail, yet like the mouse making his first leap, he

"Who's Mr. McMahon?" she cried, jumping up in surprise. "Don't scared me to death. I don't expect you, Jimmie, are you sick?"

Jimmie stood staring at the back of a chair, his mouth open, his hands outstretched.

"No," he gasped, and swallowed hard. A wild, searching look was in his eyes. "You—can you—come with me?"

"To the movies, Jimmie? Sure. Wait till eleven, you are sick. Here—I'll carry your head. It can't be the heat."

Jimmie hung the chair into a corner and released slowly toward her.

"Will you come or must I—force you?" he stammered.

A look of terror came into her big brown eyes.

"Now, you just sit here by the window for a while," she pleaded soothingly. "And I'll get you a glass—Jimmie! Jimmie! Are you crazy? Let go my wrist!"

"Jimmie, don't you know me?" she began softly, determined to make another attempt with the more feminine method of persuasion. "I'm Irene, your friend, and you—Jimmie! Stop pulling me or I'll—"

It was a hard struggle that she put up, harder than Jimmie ever anticipated. She rained blows upon his face and chest, but Jimmie, hardened to all feelings of chivalry now, at last pounced her arms down and took her up in his arms and started for the door.

"Please let me down or I'll scream," she pleaded. "Is it the heat or?"—a look of understanding and sorrow entered her eyes.

"Oh, Jimmie, and you told me you never touched it!" she added, reproachfully.

This was almost the last straw. He lunged to get her down and fell on his knees and apologized at the gas and end it all. But he couldn't strong, set his teeth tight, and nothing and groped his way down the dark staircase.

Irene, finding her pleadings useless, tried other methods. Jimmie had discounted the fact that neither her hands nor feet were bound. Strong, vigorous kicks came periodically into his stomach, while with her hands she alternated between pulling his hair and pounding him on the head. Jimmie shot his eyes.

"She may pretend she doesn't like it, but down in her heart she does," he ejaculated again and again beneath his breath. "She is a wonderful actress," he said.

As they reached the second floor a man darted down ahead of them. Irene called to him something about a kidnaper, but he either did not hear or considered kidnapping a too trivial matter to engage his attention. New faces crowded upon Jimmie's mind. Kidnaper! Police! Police! Police! He swung and might have fallen but for an opportune kick.

At last they reached the ground floor, Jimmie was dizzy and the hall furniture danced around him. He looked up at Irene. She had either fainted or was completely exhausted. He staggered to the door. It was open and the evening air greeted him. He went out and—mercy! heaven! A policeman galloping across the street and up the steps at full speed.

"I'll take her. You follow me," commanded the panting policeman. Jimmie followed in a daze. People were running in all directions. Somebody was pounding him on the back.

"A fine piece of work," a voice said. "Nobody home, I guess, 'cept the old lady, and she was down by the cellar. It got some kind of a way, eh?"

Jimmie turned and looked at the house—guided his eyes—and looked again. Smoke was pouring from the windows of the two lower floors.

The fire engines dashed up with clanging and roaring. Men pushed and shouted and swore.

"How'd it start?" asked a bystander of a fireman emerging from the house.

"Started in a corner at the foot of the stairs," was the disgusted reply. "Guess some little fellow dropped a lit cigarette."

Horried at first because it was he who had dropped the cigarette, Jimmie quickly saw that he must utilize his opportunity. He pushed out his chest and broke through the circle around the revived Irene.

Something very soft was pushing its way to his hand. Something very white and warm and beautiful was raising itself very close to his face.

"Oh, Jimmie! My great, big, brave hero!" and the face came a little closer, and—well, Jimmie was not supernaturally bashful.

Jimmie flung the chair into a corner and advanced slowly toward her and, clinging her across his saddle, carried her back to her home.

"Some day," he muttered, as he threw her through the door, "I shall carry you away with me like that—because you—you love me."

Jimmie felt something plucking his elbow. "Gee, Jimmie," whispered Irene, in awe. "Ain't he wonderful?"

"I should say," ventured Jimmie, "that he was too rough with the girl. Gee, he might hurt her."

"NONSENSE, Jimmie," she retorted. "That shows how strong and—and masculine he is. Oh, it's great," she added, wistfully.

Jimmie looked at her in astonishment. "You—don't mean to tell me," he said, "that girls actually like to be treated like that?"

"Like it?" exclaimed Irene. "Why, they adore it! A girl can't help loving a man who makes her do something she doesn't want to do. She may pretend she doesn't like it, but down in her heart she does. Why, it's better than all the soft stuff that's out! Better than a Broadway show—or a trip to Coney. Or, look, Jimmie, here's one of those comedies I'm so crazy about."

taunted with perfect composure and held himself to a piece of butter, not that he may be thought to be "entirely regardless of convention" by his companions, but because he wants the butter, is a man in a million.

Jimmie was learning this lesson. His course was evident and he was pacing his room in an almost hopeless effort to buoy up sufficient courage for its accomplishment. He would walk rudely into her room, announce in a calm and stentorian voice that she was soon to become Mrs. McMahon, and, if she refused, grab her by the wrist (for the idea of pulling her along by the hair was too revolting to his gentle nature) and hurry her down the stairs, summon a taxi and rush her to the nearest minister.

"So absurdly simple!" he assured himself, but then some little voice inside of him would insist upon answering him back. "You—Jimmie McMahon—a cave man!" it said. "Why, you are so gentle that when you were a kid you wouldn't even pull a cat's tail. You're so chivalrous that you can't see a woman standing in a street car without feeling like a debased criminal."

Still it was the only way, he argued back. His accursed tongue absolutely talked at asking the all-important question, and demanded preposterously. "What time is it, do you know?"

The ponderous pillar of the law looked down at him and grinned.

"About seven-fifteen, sonny," he answered cheerfully.

Jimmie scowled harder and went on.

In five minutes he was walking down Irene's street. Bravely, very bravely, he neared the door, reached it and walked past. Turning at the corner, he started back, but his legs insisted upon going through the same performance. Fifty yards away he stopped and looked sheepishly about to see if any one was watching him. A long pull on a cigarette strengthened him, and he hastened back once more.

The time, with a hero's pluck, he forced himself up the steps and rang the bell and waited. Remove and fear swept through his soul. He thought of his own quiet room, and he longed, oh, how he longed for that blessed barren. There was still time to could not bring himself to the act, and stood stupidly in front of her door. He looked at his watch. It was seven-thirty. The hall was deserted and badly lighted and he peered up and down. "Like it? Why, they adore it," he muttered hoarsely to himself, gaining strength.

He placed his hand on the doorknob, and—no, not yet—just a little while longer and he might feel stronger. He pulled out his watch. Twenty minutes of 8. At fifteen minutes he would do it. He walked up and down. Perspiration stood upon his brow.

Seventeen minutes of eight! He shut his mouth to keep his teeth from chattering. One minute more! He held his watch close to the light. The second hand pointed the sixty mark. He buttoned his coat, pushed open the door and—

"Come with me!"

She was sitting under the gaslight, reading and eating peanut brittle.

THE FIFTY DOLLAR BILL

By Wilson Clay Missimer

HER trip had been planned hurriedly and her packing had been done in haste and confusion, and when she entered the Pullman and the porter had found her berth for her she was all in a flutter. It had been one of those last-minute trips to New York to do some shopping, decided because her husband had made her a present of a $50 bill, which with the money she had already laid aside was sufficient for her to make the journey now instead of later, as she had intended. The matter of the money, which her husband had given her was merely one of the odd little surprises he was generally lavishing upon her, and she had stuck the bill with a pin into the pillowcase and decided then and there not to postpone her trip any longer and had begun packing immediately.

Settled at last, the hurry and excitement of the last hour seemed to fade to a mere nothing and changed for a bit of annoyance to a rather pleasant memory. Reminiscences she rehearsed the scenes in her mind. She remembered how flustered she had been, how she had ordered the maid about to do her bidding, how she had literally thrown a few clothes into her traveling bag, how she had taken a most hurried leave of her husband. She could remember distinctly having at the last minute searched up the $50 bill from the pillowcase and thrusting it into her handbag. And now, after all the confusion and excitement and worry, here she was safe aboard the train and apparently none the worse for the rush.

There were not many people in the car. Two middle-aged gentlemen sat three or four seats in front of her, heatedly discussing some topic which she could not overhear. Opposite was a rather young woman, oddly dressed, whose eyes seemed to wander restlessly through the car. Behind, a mother and two small children were conversing tirelessly, the mother endeavoring to answer patiently the questions of a very talkative son.

When the train started Mrs. Rockwell purchased a magazine and passed an hour or two in its perusal. Then becoming thirsty, she started down the aisle for the water cooler; and it was while drinking a glass of water that she remembered having left the handbag in the seat, and she realized that this was a most careless thing to do, as it contained all her money. Hurrying back, she saw with some relief that the bag was still there and, sitting down, Mrs. Rockwell, obeying some strange, sudden impulse, opened the bag and looked in. The $50 bill was not there!

She sat up rigid and stiff, gazing straight ahead of her. She had been robbed in that marvellously short time! She could scarcely believe her senses. She searched the side compartments of the bag, found her other money, which she had packed away carefully, but there was no sign of the $50 bill. She did not know what to do. She glanced about her cautiously and found the eyes of the oddly dressed woman upon her; when Mrs. Rockwell looked at her she immediately glanced away.

Mrs. Rockwell was not a woman of very decided character and was rather easily convinced. She lacked the acumen which enables one to act quickly, and she lost much time sitting rather dazedly gazing ahead of her. She was at a loss what to do. There was nothing particularly suspicious in the attitudes of those near her, yet the only person who could possibly have had the time and the chance to look into her handbag was the woman across the aisle.

But Mrs. Rockwell did not relish the task of accusing her openly and had just decided to call the conductor and explain the circumstances to him when the lady across the aisle arose and went to the water cooler for a drink, leaving a black handbag behind in her seat. Acting on a stranger, swift impulse, Mrs. Rockwell took a long chance. Glancing through the car, she saw that the woman with the two children was very busily engaged with them and that the men ahead were at the height of their argument. So she noiselessly slipped across the aisle, picked up the handbag, snatched it open and there, thrust in hurriedly among a confusion of other things, lay her $50 bill. Mrs. Rockwell took it, returned to her seat and calmly deposited it in her own bag before the lady returned.

The success of her desperate plan did not surprise her so much as did the extreme boldness of the other woman. She had heard and read of the lured and the little robbers that occur about trains, but she had always believed them with rather a shade of doubt. That an ordinarily good-looking young woman, whose wearing apparel, to say the least of it, was of rather an odd selection, should be so daring as actually to try to commit robbery in the space of time required for one to pass down the aisle and take a drink of water was indeed astounding. She could readily appreciate that it was merely because the time was so limited that the woman did not ransack the whole bag and strip it of its moneyed contents.

When the woman returned to her seat she rather carefully pushed her bag to one side and picked up a book which she had with her and began to read, leaving Mrs. Rockwell to wonder what kind of a criminal she was.

As she studied her Mrs. Rockwell thought the woman had a hard face. There was nothing about it by which one could judge of wrinkles might lead one to think she was young, but the lips were too thin and the eyes seemed about too calmly and too carefully for a person of inferior age. Her easy manner, too, gave one the suspicion that she had seen lots of the world and that it would take a great deal to throw her off her guard. Yet there was something about the face that attracted Mrs. Rockwell, and she found herself at times almost pitying the poor creature and even going so far as to advance to her the theory that possibly she was a victim of kleptomania.

The gravity of the act she herself had committed or the possible consequences of it should she be apprehended did not once come to Mrs. Rockwell's mind. She was one of those women who move upon impulse and never stop to anticipate results, and it never occurred to her that if she had been caught in the act of going through the other's handbag her own story of having first been robbed would not have been credited by the conductor, and the other woman had only to tell a simple little lie to get Mrs. Rockwell in a very compromising position. However, she had not been detected; she had made a really lucky move, had recovered her $50 bill, and was inwardly congratulating herself that she had done a clever thing. And the rest of her journey was divided between putting herself on the back and watching the movements of this woman across the aisle.

In New York, the money went fast enough, but even with what she had saved it was quite inadequate to complete the list she had made out. However, when one talks about funds there is nothing to do but to return home or go somewhere where the funds can be replenished, and Mrs. Rockwell returned home.

She telephoned her husband and he met her at the train. There was an odd little expression on his face when he kissed her and a certain reserve in his voice when he asked what kind of a time she had had, both of which impressed Mrs. Rockwell as peculiar.

"And about your shopping," she said suddenly. "You didn't do much, did you?"

"Indeed I did," Mrs. Rockwell replied. "You did?" her husband exclaimed rather wonderingly. "Why, what on?"

"Why, on the money I had saved, but principally on the $50 you gave me, dear."

Rockwell stared at her. "The $50 I gave you? Why, my dear, don't you know that you forgot that $50 and left the bill pinned to your pillowcase, where I found it the morning after you had gone?"

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S
production
"Something to Think About"
By Jeanie Macpherson

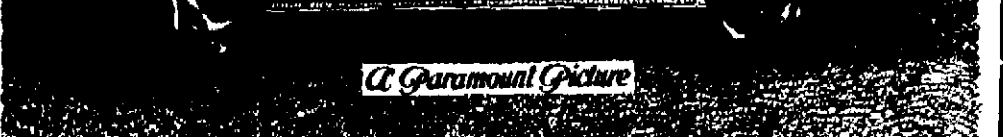

Both of their lives seemed ruined. Behind them—holly. Before them—wealth without love.

Then one day the Great Thing came! Something even bigger than love. Something no other picture ever has brought to the screen. Something you'll think about, too!

A romance that scales the heights and plumbs the depths of human experience. Set in a riot of color and beauty. Athrob with the mightiest heart appeal ever attained in a picture by DeMille.

This is DeMille's greatest picture. Better than "For Better, for Worse," "Male and Female" and "Don't Change Your Wife." All great successes and shown at this theater.

NEW LIQUID POISON FOR USE OF ARMY

Three Drops Will Kill Any Person It Touches.

New York, March 14.—The chemical warfare service has discovered a liquid poison so strong that three drops will kill anyone whose skin it touches. It became known here, falling like rain from nozzles attached to airplanes, the liquid would kill everything in the aircraft's path, according to a high official of the service.

A description of what the new war weapon would do, in the opinion of this official, follows: "One plane carrying two tons of the liquid could cover an area 100 feet wide by seven miles long in one trip and could deposit enough material to kill every man in that area, and if those on the ground were not protected by gas masks the area of fatality would be many times greater. The only limit to the quantity of this liquid which could be made is the amount of available electric power, as nearly every nation has practically an unlimited supply of the necessary raw materials."

MAY BE NULLIFIED BY THE PRESIDENT

Wilson's Postoffice Order Is Now Being Reviewed.

Washington, March 14.—President Harding, after sounding out the sentiment of leaders of the Republican party in the house, the senate and in his own cabinet, has decided it is announced, to nullify the executive order by which Woodrow Wilson, as president, had thousands of first, second and third-class postmasters in the classified service. It is understood the executive order, with the Harding signature, which will throw all those jobs open, is being drafted for promulgation early this week. The decision disclosed, however, that all department leaders were not agreed upon the desirability of the move.

FARMERS MUST BE GIVEN HELP

Secretary Wallace Appeals to People of Country.

Washington, March 14.—An appeal for every "good citizen" to do what he can to help the farmers through the period of depression, not for the sake of helping the farmer alone, but "for the sake of helping himself," was made by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Prices of farm products must rise and prices of other products come down before the normal relation between them has been restored, Wallace asserted. Talk of bringing prices back to a pre-war level, he declared, "is morally wrong and economically impossible," adding that "everybody would be better off" if an effort were made to bring about a price level, "say 70 per cent above the pre-war normal."

Clings conditions in the central west as an example, Wallace said that there, notwithstanding that "we have the finest rural civilization, taken as a whole, the world has ever seen, the farmers are now in a most trying period and are suffering severe financial losses."

Goodyear Meeting to Be Adjourned.

Akron, O., March 14.—The adjourned meeting of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company stockholders, scheduled for March 15, to ratify the company's reorganizing plans, involving $85,000,000, again will be adjourned indefinitely, it was announced by Vice President George M. Stadelman.

Ohio ranked fourth among the states in the production of bituminous coal during 1920, according to estimates announced by the geological survey. These estimates show that Ohio produced 45,000,000 net tons.

grow greater; the cries of lamentation grew louder and the feeling of the multitude struck deeper. Many women fainted.

The first word of the execution was brought from the prison yard of Canon Waters. He had administered the last rites. He said all the prisoners died like heroes. All walked to their death bravely and unassisted. There was no faltering. When the prison keeper appeared with a notice which he posted, announcing that the executions had been carried out in accordance with the decree of the courts, a group went through the crowd. Mrs. Doyle, wife of one of the dead men, who had risen from a sick bed with two two-weeks-old twins at her breast, collapsed.

The brothers of two of the executed men fell in a faint and were carried to the hospital amidst the hostile murmurs of the crowd.

Large numbers of troops, supported by tanks, had been massed around the prison during the night, but the multitude increased in size, and morning, the soldiers were ready to their barracks for fear of collisions with the civilians. Only the regular police were on duty.

Chicks Have Long Bids.

Chaffield, March 14.—After a long seven days and six hours in Leonard, New York, and returned to Chaffield, by rail, it was found that only two, out of 100 day-old chicks shipped by a local hatchery, had died. The hatchery made a statement in response to an electric telegram, received word by wire that Leonard then sent the shipment by parcel post to Chaffield, a distance of 400 miles, and the chicks, which had been hatched on the day of the telegram, doubled that time with a 100 per cent death rate.

DR. GEORGE H. BIRNEY OPENS EPWORTH REVIVAL

Speaks Morning, Afternoon and Evening Sunday.

WORLD-WAR VETERAN
IMPRESSES HEARERS

"The Folks Who 'Shore in Church' Is Subject for This Evening.

Sunday was a big day at the Epworth M. E. church, with the opening of a two-week evangelistic campaign by Dr. George H. Birney, of Cleveland, a World-war veteran. Dr. Birney, who recently assisted "Gypsy" Smith in his campaign in Columbus, comes here from a very successful series of meetings at Van Wert.

Three services were held at the Epworth church, Sunday, Dr. Birney speaking morning, afternoon and evening. The attendance was very good at the services, the large edifice being filled for the evening meeting, which was closed with an old-fashioned hand-shaking service. Dr. Birney is a very able speaker and the manner he has of bringing his message to the people is deeply impressive. He served with the Thirty-first division overseas and his sermons yesterday were intervened with incidents of the war which he used in bringing his message to the people.

On the "New Choir."

This evening Dr. Birney will speak at 7:30 o'clock on "The Folks Who 'Shore in Church'" and tomorrow afternoon, when the afternoon meeting begins, he will speak on "The Holy Spirit and the Church." Meetings will be held every afternoon during the week at 7:30 o'clock and every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Sunday morning Dr. Birney greeted the Marion people with an eloquent sermon on "The World's Only Portrait of God" and his main thought was that all that a person is, is worn upon the face. That people stand revealed before the world today by what looks out of their faces; that their faces are the screen upon which the soul records their everyday life and thoughts and dreams.

Dr. Birney took for his text as morning service, II Corinthians 4:6, referring to the verse as the only portrait of God that the world has, and the only one the world has ever seen, except through the church. He said the world knows nothing about God or about Jesus and that the world can come to know Jesus only as the light of God is portrayed through the church.

Let us hold up the Savior before the world that He may draw all men unto Himself," said the speaker.

Dr. Birney in speaking about the portrait of God spoke of the old family album. He said what a wonderful family album people have in the Word of God. He told of how the light of God shining in the soul will make its impression on the face of man. He said:

"If the soul has a mirror, it is the face; all we are, looks out of our faces and all we try to hide looks out of these faces of ours and the world judges us by what looks out of our faces. Every day of our existence lives we stand before life's camera. All that a man is and all that a man dreams is in his face. If you love anything this morning, it is a face."

The speaker told of how the glory of God was reflected upon the face of Christ, especially in those closing days of His passion.

Sunday evening Dr. Birney preached on "The Trumpet and the Sword," in which he spoke of the warfare which is on between the forces of heaven and hell. He said that humans are the only creations of God that bear the hurt cry of their kind and all do not make an effort to help.
